

THE POWER OF A CONTRACT

Aircraft maintenance technicians make Delta what it is today. These are our jobs and we deserve to have a voice in our pay, benefits, and working conditions.

We deserve the security that comes with a legally binding contract so FedEx can't make changes to our working conditions unless we say so.

Why doesn't FedEx want a union?

- FedEx increased our out-of-pocket health care costs.
- FedEx closed terminals and told some of us to get relocate or find a new job.
- FedEx reduced our retirement benefits.
- Our compensation is worse than many of our peers at other carriers.

Enough is enough. A union would give us the power to take matters into our own hands so the company can't go even further.

The Power of a Contract

- Does FedEx do business without a contract? No
- Do FedEx executives work without a contract? No
- Do FedEx union busting consultants work without a contract? No

So why should we work without a contract?

THE UNION DIFFERENCE

If you want to see the difference a union makes, look no further than UPS. While FedEx changes our benefits and working conditions on a whim, UPS mechanics get guaranteed-benefit pensions, company-funded health care benefits, industry-leading wages and more.

THE UNION DIFFERENCE IS SIMPLE:

FedEx mechanics get what FedEx thinks is best for our families.

Meanwhile, unionized UPS mechanics get what they KNOW is best for their families.

It's time to secure our future with the power of a legally binding contract.

Scan here to learn more.

FedEx Mechanics:
Absolutely, Positively Teamsters